INFORMANT INDEX ........................................................................................................ 407

SUBJECT INDEX ............................................................................................................ 421
INTRODUCTION

A directory of oral sources for researching Ukrainian Canadians emerged from a decision by the Canadian Institute of Ukrainian Studies to become involved in oral history. Before formulating its own programme, CIUS sought to determine the extent and focus of past efforts prior to December 1980. The unexpected quantity of Ukrainian-content interviews, with over 1,000 informants, showed that a substantial body of material already existed. For various reasons, however, much of it was little known, while no topical guide existed to direct researchers to potentially useful tapes.

This report provides detailed information on earlier oral history projects. Although an attempt was made to include descriptions of taped interviews in private hands, the survey concentrates on collections in major public and Ukrainian community archives. The result is admittedly not comprehensive, and hopefully others will be encouraged to list their holdings in future research reports. In all cases, entries have been prepared from interview summaries (the details vary) submitted by the different repositories. The Multicultural History Society of Ontario and the Saskatchewan Archives Board were particularly co-operative. Only a small portion of the tapes consist of folk music, academic papers and public ceremonies. The researcher is advised to contact the relevant institution or private collector to determine whether restrictions apply to the public use of a specific interview or group of tapes.

Most of the oral interviews conducted with Ukrainian Canadians by December 1980 focused on the “pioneer experience” in rural western Canada. The major exceptions were interviews recorded by the Multicultural History Society of Ontario, which emphasized the “labour experience” of Ukrainians in Ontario before the Second World War. While folk traditions received considerable attention, formal organized community life was relatively neglected with interviewees predominantly from the rank-and-file and many illiterate on first arrival in Canada.

Wherever possible, the following information is provided for each interview in the directory: informant, interviewer, date and location of interview, length, language(s) used, the existence of a transcript or synopsis, the chronological period covered, the major subjects discussed and an outline of the individual’s life or achievements. The repository’s retrieval code is also included. All entries have been assigned a number to identify them in informant and subject indexes.

The preparation of the informant index and the identification of informants have been complicated by past disregard for complete and accurate recording of interviewees’ names. Too often, for example, female informants have been identified solely as “Mrs.” with a surname; care was not taken to note the correct English-language spelling and form of Christian and/or family names; or there was inconsistency in identifying presumably one individual over several interviews. Because of such problems, and given the individuality of names, all names have been retained in the form in which they appear in the written documentation prepared by the interviewer or holding institution. As a result, there are multiple listings for some individuals, a certain awkwardness in style (as with the use of "Mr." to indicate sex if a Christian name is lacking) and the preservation of some rather obvious typographical errors. Nevertheless, this report has avoided the pitfall of introducing errors through faulty conclusions and assumptions on the part of the compiler.

In assigning subjects, the amount and type of information contained in the written summary accompanying an interview prevailed. Regardless of the detail provided, certain subjects were assigned arbitrarily - the location of the interview to pinpoint it geographically, or the subject "women" in recognition of the growing field of women's studies. An attempt was made to keep the subjects describing similar phenomena to a minimum. Thus "homesteading" was used to describe the entire pioneering and settlement process with "farming" a more suitable term for the later period. Where no specific details were available, such broad and often overlapping subject headings as organizational life, social life, community life and cultural practices were used. A major weakness of the subject index is the failure to subdivide the category "Ukraine" beyond those occasions when Galicia and Bukovyna were identified in the interview summary. However, the tape synopsis frequently records district and village of origin which should aid researchers. Despite limitations, the subject index will assist researchers to isolate those interviews most pertinent to their work.

Because the file for this report is on computer tape and can be easily updated, any errors, as well as collections of Ukrainian-content interviews not included in the survey or missing data for the interviews that are included, should be brought to the attention of the Canadian Institute of Ukrainian Studies.
PUBLIC COLLECTIONS: ALBERTA
There has been no continuously funded oral history programme at the Provincial Archives of Alberta. Some projects in the past have focused on individual ethnic communities in the province, particularly the Danes and the Jews, and one in the early 1970s recorded folk and religious music of selected minorities. However, the few taped interviews with Ukrainian content have not emerged from any programme specifically designed to preserve an oral record of Ukrainian life in Alberta.

1. Identification Number: 67.135

Historic Sites Service (Alberta Culture)
Old St. Stephen's College
8820 - 112 Street
Edmonton, Alberta

Although the Alberta Historic Sites Service has no oral history programme, interviews are sometimes conducted as part of background research into designated or potential provincial historic sites. The tape of Rev. D.M. Ponich, one of the first Ukrainian converts to Methodism in Alberta, was made during the reconstruction of Fort Victoria, now Pakan, where the Methodist Church operated a mission to the Ukrainians in the early 1900s. The remainder of the Ukrainian-content tapes in the Historic Sites Service collection originated during the construction of the Ukrainian Cultural Heritage Village, located east of Edmonton. Both the planning of the Village and the restoration of its many buildings have profited from interviews with local residents. While some tapes focus on specific buildings in the Village, others discuss life and Ukrainian activities in the surrounding area over several decades.

The oral history programme at the City of Edmonton Archives does not seek interviewees from different ethnic backgrounds, although some recordings in its collection touch upon aspects of ethnicity (such as neighbourhood profiles). The interview with the Rev. D.M. Ponich, pioneer Ukrainian Methodist minister, is the only tape to feature a Ukrainian informant or Ukrainian subject matter. Former Mayor William Hawrelak, however, has been mentioned in many interviews, particularly those with other mayors and various city aldermen.

In addition to housing the official records of the university, the University of Alberta Archives accepts collections from individuals or organizations associated with the university, as well as material produced by campus units as part of their research programmes. It holds one series of interviews with Ukrainians (many of them university students) from Edmonton and the surrounding area, recorded by Dr. Orest Starchuk, Department of Slavic Languages, in 1970. Although informants supplied some biographical data, the primary purpose of the interviews was to elicit specific linguistic information. The original tapes remain with the Department of Slavic and East European Studies.

Department of Slavic and East European Studies
University of Alberta
Edmonton, Alberta

The Department of Slavic and East European Studies, University of Alberta, has three major components to its Ukrainian-content tape collection. It holds copies of the linguistic interviews conducted by former chairman, Dr. Orest Starchuk, in the early 1970s (see University of Alberta Archives) and of selected folkloric interviews belonging to the Canadian Centre for Folk Culture Studies, Ottawa (see Canadian Centre for Folk Culture Studies for a complete listing). Since 1977-8 it has also produced a modest number of interviews annually on Ukrainian and Ukrainian Canadian folklore as part of student course fieldwork. Of the handful of tapes in the latter category, only those for which information was readily available are included in this report.

PUBLIC COLLECTIONS: BRITISH COLUMBIA
Provincial Archives of British Columbia
Sound and Moving Images Division
Victoria, British Columbia

The Provincial Archives of British Columbia, which pioneered oral history in Canada, has been the most active and organized body in the field. Its programme, beginning as the Reynoldston Research and Studies Institute, included the reminiscences of ethnic British Columbians and produced significant collections of interviews with Japanese, Doukhobors, French Canadians and Ugandan Asians in the province. At present, only three interviews have Ukrainian content, although ongoing cataloguing could increase that number.

PUBLIC COLLECTIONS: MANITOBA
Although the Manitoba Museum of Man and Nature does not operate a regular oral history programme, it has conducted interviews with the following ethnic groups in the province: German, Jewish, Ontario British, Belgian, French Canadian and Ukrainian. Many projects involved external funding; the series of Ukrainian interviews, for example, was made possible through an Opportunities for Youth grant awarded to the Ukrainian Canadian University Students' Union (SUSK) in 1971. All interviews were organized alphabetically by informant surname, which accounts for the occasional interruption in identification number sequence.

Public Archives of Canada
395 Wellington Street
Ottawa, Ontario

Sound recordings at the Public Archives of Canada are housed in the National Film, Television and Sound Archives. Incomplete cataloguing of collections, the failure to index by ethnocultural groups and the lack of translation services to identify Ukrainian-language materials makes it difficult to isolate and describe Ukrainian-content interview. As a result, the following list represents only a portion of those recordings with Ukrainian Canadian informants or pertaining to Ukrainian life in Canada. The tapes deposited by Dr. Jaroslav Rudnyckyj form the largest single collection but they are poorly identified. A handful have had to be omitted because the information provided was too scanty or unclear, while many included carry only the briefest description, and the recordings of folklore and language are not listed. Researchers are advised to consult the Inventory of Main Holdings: Sound Archives, compiled by Jacques Gagne (Ottawa 1979), for possible leads to collections with additional Ukrainian-content material.

152. Identification Number: tape 882-3

Informant: ILLIA KIRIAK
Interviewer: Jaroslav Rudnyckyj [?]
Location:
Date:
Length: 2 hours 33 minutes
Language: Ukrainian
Synopsis or transcript: none
Period: c. 1890 - 1955

Subjects: Ukraine, immigration (c. 1905), Alberta, education, literature
Comments: Coming to Canada in 1906, Kiriak was one of the early bilingual teachers serving Ukrainian rural communities in western Canada. He is best known as the author of the trilogy, Syny zemli (Sons of the Soil), a novel of the Ukrainian immigrant pioneer experience in Alberta.
“A Descriptive List of Selected Manuscript Collections at the Canadian Centre for Folk Culture Studies, National Museum of Man, Ottawa,” prepared by archivist Renee Landry in 1975, identified five collections with Ukrainian-content sound recordings: L. Boulton, R.B. Klymasz, P. Konoplenko, E. Lozowchuk and K. Peacock. The Klymasz tapes, consisting almost entirely of folksongs and instrumental music, have been listed in detail, based on the index deposited with the University of Alberta Library; the index’s inconsistency in recording informant names, however, has created problems and resulted in multiple listings for some individuals. The Canadian Centre for Folk Culture Studies will also be filing its indexes to the Boulton, Konoplenko, Lozowchuk and Peacock tapes with the University of Alberta Library, but they were not available in time for inclusion here. As a result, the information on these collections comes from the Landry article.

The Saskatchewan Archives Board (Regina office) has two collections of interviews with Ukrainian informants, both emerging from the oral history programme, “Towards a New Past,” of the Department of Culture and Youth in the mid-1970s. Approximately eighty interviews were conducted with Saskatchewan residents of Ukrainian origin in 1973 to elicit information on immigration and settlement experiences, while in 1976 an additional twenty-one interviews focused on the Ukrainian “progressive” community in the province. Extensive documentation (in English) accompanies each collection, in some cases amounting to a detailed summary or even translation of an interview. The Regina office of the Saskatchewan Archives Board also holds a small number of other tapes with Ukrainian informants.

The information that follows has been obtained from the visitation reports (which vary in the details recorded) prepared for each interview.

Informant: ANDREW SUKNASKI
Interviewer: Mick Burrs
Location: Regina, Saskatchewan
Date: 4 September 1971
Length:
Language: English
Synopsis or transcript: synopsis
Period: 1942-1980
Subjects: Saskatchewan, Wood Mountain (Saskatchewan), publishing, poetry
Comments: This interview with the Canadian poet of Polish and Ukrainian descent focuses on his activity as a small literary publisher.
In 1971-2 the federal Opportunities for Youth programme funded an oral history project among Ukrainians in western Canada. “Save Our Ukrainian Cultural Heritage” or “SUCH” interviewed approximately five hundred individuals, primarily for their immigration and settlement or pioneering experiences. The tapes are now in the possession of the Ukrainian Museum of Canada in Saskatoon, operated by the Ukrainian Women’s Association of Canada.

Although the most ambitious oral history project conducted among Ukrainian Canadians to date, “SUCH” suffered from inexperience. Informants, for example, were frequently identified only by surname and the title “Mr.” or “Mrs.,” and with few exceptions, subject matter was routinely described as “biography.” Interview synopses have not been prepared to facilitate researcher access and use because written documentation to supplement the tapes is lacking. Certain subjects have been assigned arbitrarily to give some sense of content: immigration, homesteading (here understood to encompass all aspects - economic, social, cultural - of the pioneering and settlement experience), and province and place of interview (to pinpoint the area discussed geographically). Despite the possibility of error, particularly with “homesteading” and for those tapes consisting primarily of songs and music, the advantages were thought to outweigh such misrepresentation as might result.

The Ukrainian Museum of Canada also holds a small number of other sound recordings: the official opening ceremonies of the new museum building in 1980 and, in its own archives, copies of interviews with various museum personnel (omitted from the survey).
